Parent-Child Panda Exercises

Next in the series that began with Panda Friends Exercises and Panda Pretend Exercises, here is an exercise book for parents and kids to use together. The whole family can move their bodies and pretend to be all sorts of things—bamboo shoots, a pendulum, cherries, fireworks, potato diggers, a yacht, pill bugs... Playing like that is good for your body and soul.

Taro Miura has produced many picture books for babies with beautiful drawings and simple stories. Many readers have his book Kuttsuita (Things that stick together; Kogumasha). Having been featured in both the Bologna Illustrator's Exhibition and the Bratislava Worldwide Picture Book Illustration Exhibition, he is a picture book creator with a global reputation.

The protagonist this time is El the baby elephant. Diaper-aged El may be big, but he's definitely still a baby. This series aims to push the cuteness and humor of an elephant baby living a human baby lifestyle.

KinoKino and Poki's Mysterious Fruit

Hardworking Poki and lazy KinoKino are little people who live in trees in the forest. Poki lives in a round tree, and KinoKino lives in a triangular tree. Their job is to take care of their trees. One winter, some migrating birds fly by and poop—splat—on KinoKino's tree, but that poop is no normal poop. When KinoKino does all he can to care for his tree, something amazing happens.

A pair of spirited twins deliver this picture book that gently conveys to children the abundance of nature, the power of life, and how the four seasons change.

Our Rial Life

- ◆ 64th Sankei Fuji TV Award
- ◆ 56th Kodansha Award of Children's Literature for Newcomers
- ◆ 50th Japanese Association of Writers for Children Prize for Newcomers

His name is Rial Akiyama. There isn't a kid at our school who doesn't know him. Why? Because he's awesome—the most popular kid in our grade. The one and only number one. He's the class clown and has a bright personality. All the cute girls are always gossiping about him.

This is a story of three friends: the popular guy Rial, the ordinary guy, and the handsome, half-Finnish transfer student, Saji. The ordinary protagonist is an old friend of popular Rial's and has felt inferior to him since they were little. Then he learns Rial's painful past—that his little brother died, and that he has always blamed himself for it.

Saji definitely has a thing for Rial. Does that mean he's gay? Both Rial and the protagonist are touched by his genuine personality. The depiction of the three boys' emotions is so skillful, you'll want to read the whole book in one sitting. A choir festival is complicated by crushes, and Saji gets bullied...

The three of us have different strengths and weaknesses. That's why we can help each other. This is a story of a spring and summer we spent together.

X-01

X-01 is a story of child warriors. Lata was born a warrior, but is there a reason it's okay for her to kill others to live? In a situation where survival is impossible without killing, can boy and girls find salvation in their bonds with other people? Those are the question this YA novel poses to readers. Expect big things from this Japanese hit!

Story

The day before Yu's 15th birthday, her father dies, and his final words are "X-01" Then men in black come to destroy the town in their search for the human weapon (?) X-01. What in the world... could X-01 be? Meanwhile, the country Lata lives in is on the brink of collapse. Picked up off the street by a one-eyed general, she starts down a path of blood as a female warrior. Lata, who thinks nothing of killing people, meets pure-hearted Yu. Boys and girls are thrown into conflict over a weapon that is capable of destroying everything!

Author's Profile

Born 1954. Won the Noma Children's Literature Prize, the Shogakukan Children's Publication Culture Award, and other children's literary prizes with Battery. A popular YA author in Japan, her near-future YA series No.6 was adapted into an animated TV series, as well as a comic, and sold over 1.5 million cumulative copies.

Monkey Life Series

The tranquil daily lives of monkeys on a small island will remind you of the important things in life.

"First try yawning real big. Then flop down and scratch your butt; yeah, that might be good. Once you've done that, then you're a monkey buddy," says Hiroshi Ito as a kind of forward to his monkey slice-of-life story, Monkey Life. What do monkeys do? Well, monkey things, like throwing frogs and picking fleas off of each other. However, once or twice a year the monkeys on a certain southern island are visited by Old Mr. Sea Turtle. What story from his travels will he tell this time? This offbeat tale is sure to warm your heart.
